

ABSTRACT

An apparatus and method for splitting a received optical signal into its orthogonal polarizations and sending the two polarizations on separate dual integrated waveguides to other systems on chip for further signal processing. The present invention provides an apparatus and method for facilitating the processing of optical signals in planar waveguides received from optical fibers.